

The 8th Berlin International Directors Lounge

the contemporary media and film festival Feb 9-19. 2012 at Naherholung Sternchen, behind the Kino International

The Wonders of the World stopped at seven; DL is going one better at eight. [DL8], the 8th Berlin International Directors Lounge Contemporary Media and Film Festival, is hitting Berlin in a new vein and venue, this year making the upand-comer insider tip Naherholung Sternchen its stomping ground.

The reason for the move will be clear to all once they hit the doors, literally a stone's throw from the iconic Kino International near Alexanderplatz: the location, a one-time thespians' hangout already steeped in its own history, has clearly been waiting for this moment. This place wants to be, and [DL8] is the ticket make it happen. There will be people you know and wish you did, performers, filmmakers and films, films, films, make no mistake – what you haven't seen, what you don't get to see, films not normed for consumption by the broad masses, but films of this length and that, free of clichés and predictable endings, free of everything you don't need to see yet again.

No longer an upstart after seven consecutive years and scads of films of every conceivable genre, the Directors Lounge (DL to the initiated) is still free of formula, corralling batches of like-minded works into presentable groupings but not bowing to predictability. No one knows quite what they are going to see here. That viewers can move freely around, draping themselves around the bar to take in what's splashed onto the screen may add to the slightly helter-skelter atmosphere. Question-and-answer sessions with selected directors and performers can prove as offbeat as some of the offerings, and left field live performances take it over the top. Seeing meets being.

There is nothing else like quite this in Berlin, one of the hardest claims you can make in this city. DL, while still arriving, has arrived.

Conveniently run parallel to that other media extravaganza down at Marlene-Dietrich-Platz, but free of red carpets and frozen celebs. Photo-ops only if and when you make them.

How do we get a thing like this up and rolling? Bucketloads of dedication. How can you miss it? There's the question with only one answer. You can't. Don't.

1001 nights at the cinema, all in eleven days, films like you forgot or maybe never knew they could be made, films that will change the colour of your eyes and thoughts... on-beat, offbeat and everything between.

The 8th Berlin International

the contemporary media and film festival Feb 9-19. 2012

www.directorslounge.net

- [DL8], the 8th Berlin International Directors Lounge
- Feb 9-19. 2012 (alongside the 62th Berlin International Film Festival)
- Naherholung Sternchen Berolinastraße 7 10178 Berlin / Mitte U Schillingstraße, behind the Kino International / Rathaus Mitte
- daily from 6pm ? screenings, bar, lounge, DJs, live acts, installations, specials, concerts and much, much more
- contact mail film@directorslounge.net
- mobile +49 1577 1577 332 landline +49 30 427 805 69
- press releases/logos http://directorslounge.net/press
- public relations SIEBENGRUENDE Elke Thiele
- mobile +49 177 267 4228 landline +49 · 30 41 71 69 54
- fax +49 30 41 71 69 53

• contact: film@directorslounge.net • fon: +49 30 427 805 69 • web: www.directorslounge.net

• Directors Lounge, A.Werner, Petersburger Platz 2, 10249 Berlin, Germany

• Directors Lounge is the brainchild of A&O-gallery, Designhof e.V., Cinema Desaster and the gallery KMZA with outstanding support from the art resort, placebo FX, Berliner Licht & Silber and many other friends.